Creditable Drills Put Up by Competing Companies in Yesterday's Events.

THE DAY AT CAMP CURTIS.

The Maiden Infantry Drill Finished in

Manuer Entirely Creditable. The old fair grounds, the homely confines of which have witnessed many an attractive sight, never viewed anything prettier than the interstate competitive drill now in progress. There is an indefinable charm about a military encampment, and the present one, made up as it is of crack companies from various sections of the country, is richly endowed with everything calculated to please the eye and attract the fancy. The organizations in camp came here for a purpose and not merely for experience, as is the case in the annual encampments of the State militia everywhere. Their practice drills are thorough and arduous. Yet the boys are never unwilling to put in all the time possible in them, because they feel that so much is at stake. There is never any shirking when shaping up for a prize drill. Almost any way the visitors turned vesterday they richly endowed with everything calculated any way the visitors turned yesterday they could see companies hard at work on the manual. There is during the day, of course, little opportunity for foot movements, except early in the morning or late in the evening, when the track is unoccupied.

tors and soldiers. During the forenoon the grand-stand was but sparsely occupied, though the several hundred occupants succeeded in making their presence known to the competing companies, applauding all the good points of the drill, and giving them all possible encouragement. By 2 o'clock, however, there were fully a thousand spectators in the stand, while as many more viewed the work of the soldier boys from the enclosure within the half-mile tracks. There were many parties of ladies in carriages, and a pretty picture some of them presented with their white dresses and the colors of their favorite companies prominently worn. The interest in the encampment is steadily increasing, as is most natural, and will culminate to-morrow in the national holiday. While the interest manifested in the maiden infantry drill has been fully up to expectations, it very naturally falls far expectations, it very naturally falls far short of that in the free-for-all, which is, of course, to be the feature of the encampment. To compare this maiden drill with the free-for-all would be like en drill with the free-for-all would be like comparing a three-minute trot with a 2:18 class. It can be said with all fairness and honesty, however, that the maiden drill was a revelation in some respects. It showed a proficiency on the part of two or three companies which will quickly land them in the faster class and was altogether much above the grade of similar drills in other encampments. Men who have witnessed and taken part in many affairs of the kind expressed themselves yesterday as surprised at the splendid material in some of the young companies, and predicted that they would be heard from in two or three years from now.

THE MAIDEN INFANTRY DRILL. The bugle sounded the inspection call a few moments before 9 o'clock yesterday morning, and at that hour the seven companies on the day's programme marched upon the drill-ground. It took just an hour willey & GROHS.

When Captain Joyce brought his promising young company, the Avon Rifles, on to the drill ground their friends gave on to the drill ground their friends gave them a hearty enough reception to inspire them with winning qualities. The young soldiers from Avondale presented a handsome appearance with their gray uniforms, modeled something after the West Point style, with white cross and waist belts and plain helmets. They went through the manual in good style, but were not so clever in the foot movements, owing to some nervousness and the misunderstanding of several commands. Their errors were some nervousness and the misunderstanding of several commands. Their errors were altogether the result of an almost total lack of experience. Captain Joyce is an admirable commander and will yet bring his company to the front in competitive drills. It has the material and only needs the hard work of a few encampments to push it to the fore. The Rifles are fortunate in having a captain like Joyce, whose discipline, though thorough, is of that character which will never cause dissatisfaction in their ranks. Captain Joyce came within four movements of completing the programme. ing the programme.

The afternoon programme was materially changed. Instead of being opened by the Aurora Zouaves, as scheduled, that company's drill was postponed until today, and the Indianapolis Light Artillery delighted the crowd with an exhibition of the way in which they have captured prizes in past years. When Captain Curtis and his artillerymen were seen approaching the guns and caisons which had been hauled on to the track during the noon hour, there was cheering enough to gratify even the ambition of these prize-winners. Their exhibition was but a brief one, lasting only seventeen minutes, but it was plenty only seventeen minutes, but it was plenty long enough to show the perfection attained by the Indianapolis company in the difficult artillery drill. Their work was done rapidly and without a break, and they were cheered at the close of the exhibition

WITHDRAWAL OF THE PARIS PICKETS. There was considerable-disappointment when it was announced that the Paris Pickets, who came all the way from Paris, Tex., to compete in the maiden drill, had withdrawn. They were to have followed the exhibidrill of the Indianapolis Light Artillery and were believed to stand an excellent chance to win first money. Their withdrawal was a matter of much surprise and speculation, the cause given being that their captain was unable to get his drillteam together in time to march upon the field at the bugle call. This flusy excuse, which was, to say the least, a sad commentary upon the ambition and discipline of the company, was laughed at by the officers and members of the other companies. The truth is that Captain Green had his company ready and the programme of the drill in his hand, when for some mysterious and altogether unaccountable reason he turned to the boys and informed them that he would not enter the drill. He gave them no explana-tion and they had no recourse but to acquiesce in his determination.

Had he made known his intention an hour, or even half an hour before the boys would or even half an hour before the boys would have insisted on going in under command of one of the lieutenants. It was too late, however, and, through the whim of one man, a score of ambitious young militiamen were deprived of the opportunity to win money and laurels and their pleasure spoiled. They were indignant at their captain's action and seemed utterly unable to account for it. The encampment had no further attraction for them and, though they ther attraction for them and, though they had the sympathy of the whole camp, they felt so humiliated that they left for home last night it charge of the lieutenants. Capt. Green did not accompany them. He is severely censured on all sides for his extraordinary action. At the expiration of the forty-five minutes allotted to the Paris Pickets and which was filled in by a band concert in the grand stand, the Dickason Light Artillery, of Danville, Ill., opened the contest in that arm of service. Their drill was a cleancut affair throughout, the mechanical work being especially fine. The way they mounted and dismounted, himbered and unlimbered, and handled the guns and caissons, caused the grand-stand to run over with enthusiasm. Their moveto run over with enthusiasm. Their move-ments were very rapid, and the firing was Ark., came sweeping along to the inspiring strains of "Dixie," and received an ovation. Their modest gray uniform, with its hand-some black, broad trimmings, clothed a soldierly set of young Southrons. Captain Mitchell and his men looked like winners as they opened the manual in a style Fully three thousand people visited the grounds yesterday. The weather was delightful, a cool breeze blowing all day and the afternoon being pleasantly cloudy. The glare of the sun on the big drill ground during the morning was rather trying on the eyes, but that drawback was happily lacking during the latter half of the day. The retirement of old Sol behind a friendly and persevering bank of clouds was grateful alike to spectators and soldiers. During the forenoon the grand-stand was but sparsely occupied. that was worthy of veteran campaigners in the infantry companies that had drilled up There was, however, a surprise in store for the crowd. The cheering which had greeted the close of the Fletchers' drill had scarceiy died away when the white plumes of the Pugh Videttes, of Columbus, O., fluttered into view and a company of handsomely dressed militiamen, all of about the same height, was soon in action. The Ohio boys have a showy uniform, consisting of blue frock coats, white duck pants, blue helmets and white plumes. They were the last company in the maiden drill and closed it, figuratively speaking, in a company in the maiden drill and closed it, figuratively speaking, in a blaze of glory. Their identity was not generally known or so easily recognizable as that of the Fletcher Rifles nor was their welcome as enthusiastic. They had not been long at work, however, before they began to get the recognition due them, for the crowd, like almost all other gatherings of the sort, was quick to recognize merit and equally as quick to testify to their recognition of it. The Videttes' drill in the manual was wonderfully fine throughout. They were not weak in a single point, and their firing was exceptionally good. Their foot movements showed the same evidence of hard work, the wheels being excellent. The right and left turns—very difficult movements to execute well—were notably fine. Captain Bailey put his men through in shorter time than any of his predecessors in the maiden than any of his predecessors in the maiden drill, getting through in forty minutes. This completed the maiden drill and concluded the day's contests.

No time was lost forming the Third Regi-ment for diess parade. The Avon Rifles ment for diess parade. The Avon Rifles were the color company, the Pugh Videttes being on the right and the Omaha Guards on the left of the line. Maj. James R. Ross was in command, and the parade delighted the crowd beyond measure. It was followed immediately by another dress-parade by the First Regiment, Col. W. J. McKee commanding. The McCarthy Light Guards were the color company, and, though somewhat hurried, the parade was a beautiful sight. At its conclusion the companies sight. At its conclusion the companies broke into columns of fours and formed for the parade, which left the grounds only ten minutes late.

THE GRAND PARADE.

Thousands of People Witness a Brilliant Display of the Gallant Citizen Soldiery. The parade of the military companies from Camp Curtis through the principal streets of the city last evening was a brilliant event. Indianapolis has seen many processions of greater magnitude, but never one which moved with such admirable precision, and which was so distinctively a military pageant. There was all along the line of march a great display of the national colors, and in the business part of the city the effusion of red, white and blue took on many striking and original forms. On Washington and all the neighboring streets along the line of march there was a dense pack of people on the sidewalks, while the windows were thronged with ladies and children. The streets were kept clear for the procession, and, though the crowds were eager to see, they were always good natured and easily managed, so that the labor of the police was comparatively

The procession left the camp at 6:30 P. M., and moved in a rapid swinging gait west to Meridian street, from where the line of march was as follows: South on Meridian to Ohio, west on Ohio to Illinois, south to Washington, west to Tennessee, south to Georgia, east to Illinois, north to Washing-ton, east to East, countermarch on Washington to Pennsylvania, north on Pennsylvania to New York, where the procession disbanded.

When the procession reached Ohio street a detachment of Metropolitan police, sixteen in number, with guides and commanded by Captain Quigley, fell in at the head of the procession. At this point the procession was joined by the Indianapolis Light Infantry under Lieutenant Conde, Company A under Lieutenant Prince, a brigade of Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, under Col. B. A. Richardson and a canton of Patriarchs Militant. At the corner of Illinois and Georgia streets the canton of Patriarchs Militant. At the corner of Illinois and Georgia streets the Union Veteran League, under Col. W. H. Tucker, and the Sons of Veterans took the head of the column, which changed the order of procession. This was the first appearance of the league, headed by the When Band, and they made a fine showing, 140 strong, marching behind two elegant silk banners, one, of course, being a large edition of the stars and stripes.

The order of procession, with the excep-The order of procession, with the excep-

The hour and a half having elapsed from the time the procession left the camp, a very creditable march, as the men moved rapidly and no time was wasted.

THE PROGRAMME FOR TO-DAY. Beginning of the Free-for-All and Some Speculation as to the Result, The great free-for-all drill-the one which is exciting the attention of the entire South and a goodly portion of the Northwill be opened at 2 o'clock this afternoon, by the Seeley Rifles, of Galveston, Tex. The programme for to-day is as follows: 10:30 A. M., Aurora Zouaves; 11:15, Battery A, St. Louis; 2 P. M., Seeley Rifles, Galveston; 2:45, Dallas Artillery, Dallas; 3:30, Fletcher Riffes; 4:15, National Fenci-bles; 5, Branch Guards; 5:30 and 6:30, dress parades. The fact that the crack companies will begin drilling to-day will un-doubtedly cause a largely increased attendance. There is considerable quiet bettendance. There is considerable quiet betting on the result of the free-forall, and, while the Belknap Rifles were favorites for a time, there is a pretty well-grounded belief that the Fencibles and the Southern Cadets, of Macon, should not be in the field when it comes to figuring on the thing from a poolselling stand-point. The fact is, it is anybody's race and a dark horse may capture it. The winners, however, will know they have been in a race, for a likelier lot of have been in a race, for a likelier lot of entries has not been seen in a competitive drill in this country for many years. All the companies have been working for weeks perfecting themselves for this contest. The Fencibles were camped in their armory for four weeks prior to their coming here, drilling five hours a day. The McCarthy Light Guards were in camp several weeks, drilling six and seven hours a day, and the ing six and seven hours a day, and the other commands have done equally as much work. It is going to be a close race and an exciting one.

SOCIAL FEATURES OF CAMP LIFE. Reception to the Belknap Rifles Yesterday

Morning-Fortunate Sponsors. The chaperon, Mrs. Henry Schurmann the sponsor, Miss Emma Thompson, and maids of honor, Miss Carrie Vajen and Miss Elizabeth Ray, gave a reception yesterday morning, from 10 to 12 o'clock, at the residence of Dr. J. L. Thompson, in honor of the Belknap Rifles, which company they represent. The ladies were assisted by Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. J. W. Ray, Mrs. James B. Curtis, Maj. D. A. Thompson, Captain Garrard and Private Secretary W. B. Roberts. The officers of the company, Captain Green and Lieutenant Howard, were of the receiving party. The officers of the National Fencibles and a few other gentlemen, with a majority of the sponsors and maids of honor of the encampment, comprised the the guests. The uniforms of the gentlemen and the beautiful gowns of the young women, in the tastefully arranged rooms made a rare picture. Plants and flowers in profusion ornamented the parlors, and above the broad doors leading to the broad doors leading hall was a festoon of ribbons of different colors, each bearing the record of some victory of the Belknap Rifles, a cluster of colors of which each member of the regiment is justly proud. The guests were escorts for each other to the cool diningroom, where ices were served from a highly-polished table embellished with ferns and daisies. Among the guests were Brigadier general Roberts and wite, and Mrs. and the Misses Jones, and wife, and Mrs. and the Misses Jones, of San Antonio, who accompanied the Rifies, Miss Sells, of St. Louis, Miss Michener, of Washington, Miss Fletcher, of Orlando, Fla., Miss Schwefel, of Athens, O. Mrs. C. E. Coffin, Miss Mary Marguerite Roberts, Miss Hanson and Miss Roberts have issued invitations for a twilight party, from 6 to 9 o'clock this evening, at No. 375 Central avenue, in honor of Battery A, St. Louis Light Artillery, which they repre-sent. The invitations are printed and addressed in red—the company's color.

The Omaha Guards will meet socially, this morning, from 10 to 12, with Mrs. S. D. Pray, No. 1063 North Illinois street, where Mrs. Frank Gregory, of Omaha, formerly of this city, will receive her friends informally.

formally. The "Chicks" Are Here.

The Chickasaw Guards, of Memphis, Tenn -the famous "Chicks" whose name is familiar to every one in the country who has the slightest interest in competitive military drills—arrived yesterday on the Vandalia, at 3:30 P. M. Their baggage was delayed and did not get here until evening, hence they could not take part in the parade. The "Chicks" were organized so long ago that no one on earth can remember the exact date, and their victories in prize drills are too numerous to tell of in any one issue of a newspaper.

They have won nearly enough money to pay off the national debt, and will try to keep their hands in by carting home $2,500 from Indianapelis. The officers and drill team are as follows:

Captain—Harry Allen. Lieutenants—Keller Anderson and Guy E. Pat-Sergeants-W. P. Wildberger and R. A. Ed-Corporals—T. G. McCielland, A. C. Looney, J. S. Simmons and R. P. Cary.
